

Academic Honesty Policy

All schoolwork submitted for the purpose of meeting course requirements must represent the efforts of the individual student. Any form of academic dishonesty is prohibited. Academic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to, the following: plagiarism, cheating, forgery, copying or stealing another person's work, allowing another person to copy one's work, doing another person's class work, creating more than one copy of one's work for distribution, intentionally accessing another's material for the purpose of using it as one's own, downloading information from other sources and presenting it as one's own, unauthorized copying of software, or unauthorized use of hard copy or software to develop one's own software. Faculty and building administrators will have the responsibility of monitoring the above actions.

Cheating

Cheating is the act of disseminating or receiving answers, data, or other information by any means other than those expressly permitted by the teacher as part of any academic exercise.

Cheating is defined as and includes, but is not limited to, the following:

1. Copying or attempting to copy another student's homework, quiz, test, essay, or lab report.
2. Cheating on tests through such means as cheat sheets, use of unauthorized electronic devices, or discussion of test information with other students.
3. Obtaining test questions and/or copies of tests outside the classroom test setting.
4. Lending and/or copying another student's work (homework, tests, projects, assignments).
5. Altering or interfering with grading (forging signatures, changing or inserting answers on work after grading).
6. Allowing another student to copy answers during a test situation.
7. Collaborating with other students on an assignment in direct violation of teacher's instructions.
8. Using books and electronic information in generating an assignment in direct violation of teacher's instruction.
9. Accessing, taking, and benefiting from copies of tests and quizzes previously used or to be used by teachers, unless provided as study guides by the teacher.
10. Submitting work previously presented in this course or in another course.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is the act of using another person's ideas or expressions in one's writing without acknowledging the source.

Plagiarism is defined as and includes, but is not limited to, the following:

1. Copying material from a source, including material from the Internet, without citing the source, or citing the source but omitting quotation marks.

2. Paraphrasing from a source without proper citation.
3. Copying stories, in whole or part, which appear in books, magazine, television, or film.
4. Copying directly, without making any changes, alterations, or adaptations from a drawing, painting, illustration, photographic image, or graphic symbol, without citing the source.
5. Submitting papers written in whole or part by someone else, including papers from, but not limited to, the Internet.
6. Submitting papers on which the student has received substantial assistance from peers and/or adults that dramatically changes the character of the work so that it is no longer the student's own.
7. Submitting papers purchased from a research or term paper service, including papers from, but not limited to, the Internet.
